Justice & Morality

🕒 8:15am - 4:15pm, Feb 9

Click here to see the Justice & Morality Preconference schedule.

The justice and morality pre-conference has a nearly 20-year history of bringing together top scholars in the field to share their most recent findings and facilitate interdisciplinary dialogue. It presents a unique opportunity to connect two subareas that are thematically related, and yet typically studied independently. This year, confirmed speakers include Aneeta Rattan, Neil Lewis, Ivy Onyeador, Paul Bloom, Robb Willer, Michael Muthukrishna, and Jillian Jordan. We are also seeking submissions from graduate students, post-docs and junior faculty who want to present a poster or a microtalk.

Gender

🕒 9:00am - 4:00pm, Feb 9

Click here to see the Gender Preconference schedule.

The Gender Preconference brings together emerging and classic approaches to the social psychology of gender. Presentation formats include symposia, data blitzes, posters, and a panel discussion. Invited speakers will include early career rising stars through established scholars. Symposia will consist of several 20-minute talks, as well as two keynote presentations by former gender pre-conference organizers, which focus on topics such as men and masculinity and intersectionality. Data blitz sessions will feature 5-minute talks that highlight innovative work on “hot topics” of interest. The program will also include a panel discussion featuring leading experts on the unequal impact that COVID-19 has on women (particularly on women who are members of other disadvantaged groups), and a poster session that offers additional opportunities for presenters to share their gender research in a relaxed atmosphere. We invite applications for data blitz talks and posters from students and academics at all stages of their careers.

Psychology of Media and Technology

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 9

Click here to see the Psychology of Media and Technology Preconference schedule.

The role of media and digital technologies in daily life continues to expand as a consequence of recent national and international events. At the same time, technological advances are providing researchers unprecedented, ecologically valid insights into human behavior. This preconference will feature researchers from a variety of disciplines who are harnessing the latest methodological advances to understand the effects of media and technology on society. Presenters will discuss large-scale data studying people's behaviors and psychological experiences during the COVID-19 pandemic, as well as how technology is shaping the political landscape in an election year. Additional sessions will explore advancements in video game technology and innovative methods using tools such as smartphones and wearables. Moreover, we will feature a panel on the logistics of interdisciplinary collaboration, and a data blitz and poster session will showcase work from emerging scholars.

Existential Psychology

🕒 10:00am - 7:00pm, Feb 9

Click here to see the Existential Psychology Preconference schedule.

Existential psychology (XP) examines critical issues of “being” and “becoming” in the study of human nature and social life, including such core psychological dynamics as the awareness of mortality; freedom, control, and autonomy; the struggle for personal and social identity; isolation and shared reality; and the quest for meaning and purpose in life. In recent years, XP’s advances in theory generation and methodological innovation have enabled researchers to empirically test bold ideas about the psychological underpinnings of social behavior. The 2021 XP preconference will apply these empirical insights to understand and address ongoing personal and systemic existential crises. These include the COVID-19 pandemic; women’s rights and the #MeToo movement; political extremism and authoritarianism; racial injustice and police misconduct; shared reality and media distrust in the “fake news” era; global climate change and traumatic environmental events (e.g., hurricanes); and efforts to cultivate peace and happiness amid the chaos.

Dynamics in Personality Development

🕒 11:00am - 3:00pm, Feb 9

Click here to see the Dynamics in Personality Development Preconference schedule.

The Dynamics in Personality Development Preconference merges the Lifespan Social-Personality (LSP) and Personality Dynamics, Processes, and Functioning (PDPF) preconferences into a single preconference for SPSP 2021. We decided to integrate our two preconferences to focus on areas of common interest given recent theoretical advances that connect personality dynamics and development (e.g., Baumert et al., 2017; Wrzus, 2019). Like last year's LSP preconference, we will take an "unconference" approach featuring unconventional and interactive programming intended to encourage active involvement by all attendees. Like last year's PDPF preconference, we will feature symposia on new directions in personality research using state-of-the-art methodology. The preconference will feature a dialogue by prominent scholars on personality dynamics and development, a hackathon on utilizing new methods to generate new insights, and symposia on personality change and personality processes. Finally, a data blitz will allow attendees to present new work on lifespan personality and personality dynamics.

Origins of the Social Mind

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 10

Click here to see the Origins of the Social Mind Preconference schedule.

What are the origins of the social mind? Addressing this question requires integrating insights from developmental psychology (how does the social mind change with age?), comparative psychology (which aspects of the social mind are shared with other species versus unique to humans?) and cross-cultural psychology (what is the degree of variation in the social mind across contexts?). Together, research from these disciplines has shed light on the psychological mechanisms that shape and constrain social reasoning and behavior among humans. While each of these sub-disciplines has made distinct contributions to social psychology, it is rare for such theoretical and methodological diversity to be represented in one place. In this innovative and interdisciplinary pre-conference, we bring together developmental, comparative and cross-cultural perspectives to showcase research investigating key questions about the foundations of social thought and behavior.

Bringing Intragroup Processes back to Social Psychology

🕒 8:45am - 5:15pm, Feb 10

Click here to see the Bringing Intragroup Processes back to Social Psychology Preconference schedule.

The origins of social psychology can be traced back to early studies of intragroup processes by Lewin and others. In recent years, however, social psychologists have drifted away from the 'social' roots from which our field originated. In this unique preconference, we seek to re-invigorate research interest in the study of social interactions within groups. We will feature an array of speakers from social psychology as well as management and other disciplines (e.g., computer sciences) who are doing cutting edge work on intragroup processes, and we will conclude with a discussion on why social psychologists should be studying intragroup processes and why the area of intragroup processes would benefit from going back to its psychological roots.

Political Psychology

🕒 9:00am - 4:20pm, Feb 10

Click here to see the Political Psychology Preconference schedule.

The political psychology preconference brings together researchers to discuss topics in political cognition and behavior. The aims of the preconference are to facilitate the dissemination of cutting-edge research in political psychology, to honor the leaders of the field, and to promote the next generation of political psychologists. Back by popular demand, this year's preconference will again feature themed "mini-symposia" – this time on topics such as Psychophysical Political Psychology and Political Misinformation. We will also feature a debate between two leading researchers on the nature and structure of political ideology. In addition to faculty speakers, we host a graduate student talk, data blitz, poster session, and paper-swap.

Sustainability

🕒 10:00am - 6:30pm, Feb 10

Click here to see the Sustainability Preconference schedule.

Welcome to the 10th annual Sustainability Psychology Preconference! This year's theme is "Climate Change at a Crossroads." To reduce the risks of catastrophic climate change, urgent action is needed within the next decade. Recent events have shown that widescale mobilization to address collective problems is possible. How do we effectively employ social change to address climate change? What are the sticking points and how can they be overcome? We invite researchers and practitioners, whether newcomers or established, to help us explore the latest research on climate change engagement, from understanding group processes and the role of identity, to examining interventions to encourage mitigation and adaptation. Of special interest will be research that examines these questions in light of the global pandemic and increased mobilization around social justice issues. Our preconference includes a keynote address, invited speaker sessions on basic, applied, and policy research, blitz sessions, posters, and networking time.

Shared Reality and Authenticity

🕒 10:30am - 4:40pm, Feb 10

Click here to see the Shared Reality and Authenticity Preconference schedule.

Establishing shared realities is basic to human nature. People turn to each other to make sense of their experiences: they seek to verify what is true and authentic, both about the world around them and about themselves. In today's world, questions about how people discern what is truly real have become increasingly ubiquitous. How do interpersonal relationships shape people's beliefs about the world? What kinds of interpersonal interactions feel authentic? How do close partners shape people's sense of self, and their sense of reality? This preconference explores these questions by assembling a diverse group of experts from the fields of Shared Reality and Authenticity to discuss how humans turn to each other to determine the truth.

Confirmed speakers include:

Serena Chen (Berkeley)

Ximena Garcia-Rada (Harvard)

E. Tory Higgins (Columbia)

Maryam Kouchaki (Kellogg)

Julianna Pillemer (NYU)

Maya Rossignac-Milon (Columbia)

We will also host an Early Career Data Blitz and Poster Session.

So, you have a great idea to improve the SPSP climate?

We want to hear from you! We are always looking for new ideas and initiatives. We encourage SPSP members at any stage of their career to reach out to DCC members if interested in exploring new strategies to improve the SPSP climate. Opportunities exist to explore new initiatives and present them to the SPSP Leadership (e.g., task force committees). Please contact jkang@spsp.org or current DCC members (see link: <https://my.spsp.org/members/leadership>)

So, you want to join the DCC?

We are looking for members who are committed to diversity, equity, and inclusions and willing to be a diversity advocate on behalf of membership. Incoming members should have some experience in coordinating diversity efforts in either academic or non-academic settings. Preference is given for members who are in advanced stages of their career (i.e., not junior).

Presidential Plenary -- Social/Personality Psychology and COVID-19: Responses and Responsibility in the Pandemic Age

🕒 10:15am - 11:30am, Feb 11

The COVID-19 pandemic has dramatically changed the way (and whether) we work, raise our children, inhabit our homes, process news and information, and love, communicate and interact with others. Social/personality psychology speaks to all of these life contexts. How can we, have we, and should we contribute to public discourse in this pandemic age?

Psychology in the Social Media Era: Understanding Aggressive Behavior Online

🕒 11:45am - 12:45pm, Feb 11

This symposium features research on the relationships between ideology, social media, and negative outcomes (aggression, misinformation, polarization). Drawing on a range of theories (social norms, social identity, Big Five, negative partisanship, heuristics) and methods (experiments, big data), we explore how these relationships play out, and how to combat negative behavior.

Spilling the Tea: Social Psychology of Gossip

🕒 11:45am - 12:45pm, Feb 11

Why do we gossip, what happens when we do, and does not gossiping hurt us? Using well-powered experiments and insights from new techniques, we explore the social psychology of gossip. We show how boredom can produce gossip, how most gossip is neutral, why we may not be so good at detecting lies in gossip, and why some people would rather be gossiped about than not discussed at all.

Macro-Level Social Psychology: New Approaches to Studying Attitudes and Stereotypes

🕒 11:45am - 12:45pm, Feb 11

Individual minds exist within the macro-level of communities, yet macro-level influences are rarely tested. Today, big data (e.g., archived language and Project Implicit) newly make it possible to quantify the macro-level across geography and demographics. This symposium integrates the most recent data, methods, and theory in a new approach to the study of social group attitudes and stereotypes.

Diversity Undergrad Mentoring Event (Invitation only)

🕒 12:45pm - 1:45pm, Feb 11

The Undergraduate Mentoring Event, hosted by the Diversity and Climate Committee (DCC), celebrates this year's winners of the Diversity Undergraduate Registration Awards. Undergraduate award winners will be paired with past Diversity Graduate Travel Award winners to share tips and advice on topics related to research, applying to graduate school, networking, and professional development. Invitation only.

What to expect in this virtual event?

The virtual event will take place in a Zoom meeting room. The DCC will give opening remarks. Then undergraduate student winners and their mentors will join the breakout room that has the name of the graduate student mentor. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher to participate. Use of video is encouraged, but not required.

GASP Mentoring Event (Pre-registration is required)

🕒 12:45pm - 1:45pm, Feb 11

Co-sponsored by the GLBT Alliance in Social and Personality Psychology (GASP) and the SPSP Diversity and Climate Committee, this event features volunteer faculty mentors hosting small group discussions of research and professional issues, including LGBT issues in the academic job market, positioning LGBT research for publication, obtaining funding for research on sexual-minority populations, and other diversity and professional development topics. Pre-registration is required.

What to expect in this virtual event?

The virtual event will take place in a Zoom meeting room. Each mentor will be assigned to a break-out room. Pre-registered attendees will join the specific breakout room they selected during pre-registration for 60 minutes. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher to participate. Use of video is encouraged, but not required. Please remember to mute your microphone while you are not speaking to minimize background noise.

A Conversation About Conducting Social Psychological Research in Non-WEIRD Setting in the Post-COVID Era

🕒 12:45pm - 1:45pm, Feb 11

This networking event will bring together researchers from regions of the world underrepresented in mainstream social psychological and personality research. We will discuss the challenges and opportunities researchers face in a scientific community so far dominated by WEIRD cultures. Hosted by the SPSP International Committee.

Early Career Committee Lounge Event: Guess Who Quiz

🕒 12:45pm - 1:45pm, Feb 11

Can you identify these pre-eminent scholars from when they were early career?

Gay Migration vs. Person-Environment Fit: A Regional Analysis

🕒 1:00pm - 1:15pm, Feb 11

We examined the effects of sexual orientation, sexuality attitudes, and regional gay-friendliness on migration patterns. Lesbian and gay people's migration patterns were predicted primarily by regional gay-friendliness. In contrast, straight people's migration depended both on personal sexuality attitudes and regional gay-friendliness.

Effects of Social Control on Eating and Relational Behavior in Romantic Relationships over Time

🕒 1:00pm - 1:15pm, Feb 11

Deliberate attempts by one partner to change the other's behavior (i.e., social control) can have varying effects on their health and relationships. An experimental study and a daily diary study examine how the social control strategies that romantic partners enact to change each other's behavior elicit unique relational and eating responses over time that affect health and relationship outcomes.

Personality Evaluated: What Do People Like and Dislike About Themselves and Their Friends?

🕒 1:20pm - 1:35pm, Feb 11

What are your best and worst traits, and do your friends agree? 463 targets and their friends provided open-ended descriptions of the targets' best and worst traits. Compared to self-reports, informant reports more frequently featured the prosocial domains of agreeableness and honesty-humility. These results shed light on the traits we most appreciate and despise in ourselves and our friends.

Creating a Digital Classifier of COVID-19 Threat

🕒 1:20pm - 1:35pm, Feb 11

Previous research finds that experiences of realistic threat during COVID-19 predict more social distancing compliance, while symbolic threat predicts less compliance. In the current research, we trained an AI algorithm to assess the natural occurrence of these two types of psychological threats on Twitter and used location data to assess how this relates to social distancing.

Ecological and Perceptual Antecedents to Mental Health and Well-Being

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

We utilize archival and survey data to study predictors of well-being at different levels. At the contextual level, we examine the influence of various geographic units on loneliness, anxiety, and mental distress. At the individual level, we explore the influence of mixed emotions and lay beliefs about happiness on subsequent measures of well-being.

Fake News: Novel Interventions to Tackle the Spread of Misinformation

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

Although research on the psychology of fake news is flourishing, much less is known about how to effectively limit the spread of misinformation. This symposium on combatting misinformation presents new insights into the pitfalls of debunking and advances three cutting-edge interventions: protection against micro-targeting, think-pause interventions, and the longevity of psychological inoculation.

Social Status: New Work Challenging the Status Quo

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

What is status, who wants it, and how do men and women get it? Talks showcase cutting-edge theory and data that make us rethink long-held answers to these questions. Four speakers leverage cross-disciplinary perspectives and multi-method approaches to present novel investigations of male and female status, illustrating actionable new directions for research on status, gender, power and politics.

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

Our symposium highlights biases in interpretation of police-civilian confrontations. Perceived civilian threat biases distance estimations in recorded footage. Officer gender influences attributions of use of force. Identification with police shapes punishment decisions when officer reports diverge from footage. Race impacts perceptions of emotional pain and need for support after fatal shootings.

Intertemporal Insights on Moral Judgment and Decision Making

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

Moral judgments and decisions are situated in time. This symposium takes an intertemporal perspective to examine how people's perceptions of the past and expectations about the future affect moral judgment and decision making. Findings from four talks offer new insights into temporal barriers to addressing social challenges including gender equality, racial diversity, and climate change.

Exploring Purpose in Life as a Moderator of Adjustment

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

This symposium explores how a sense of purpose shapes the impact of perceptions, thoughts, and feelings on adjustment. In four talks, purpose is tested as a moderator of links between future time perspective and well-being; moral comparisons and self-image; urgency and risk behavior; and acquisition beliefs and well-being. Findings situate purpose as a resource across unique adjustment domains.

Keep It Together: Self-Regulation Challenges Amid the COVID-19 Pandemic

🕒 1:45pm - 2:45pm, Feb 11

This symposium discusses the self-regulation challenges during COVID-19, as well as identifying factors that contribute to optimal adaptation. The first talk shows that adopting new preventative behaviors (e.g., social distancing) depletes self-regulatory resources, and contributes to declined health behaviors and poorer mental health. The second and the third talks discuss how individual differences affect self-regulation during this time of crisis. Findings from the second talk suggest that individual differences such as mindfulness and empathic concern predict different aspects of self-regulation (e.g., adaptive coping vs. compliance with government guidelines). The third talk reveals that people higher in intellectual humility indicate greater intent to practice social distancing, partly because of their engagement in fact-checking. The last talk demonstrates the effectiveness of using “if-then” plans to increase self-regulation and promote health behavior change. Together, these talks provide novel insights for how people can rapidly adapt to difficult new norms during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Workshop and Hackathon on Creating Cutting-Edge Open Science Syllabi for African Research Methods Courses

🕒 9:00am - 10:30am, Feb 12

Social psychology is a global enterprise. However, we lack freely-available resources adapted to indigenous languages and circumstances. This workshop and hack-a-thon will focus on creating cutting-edge syllabi on open science to address this problem on the African continent. The event will proceed in two parts. The first part consists of a 45-minute series of talks on open science issues. The second consists of a 45-minute hack-a-thon in which we will engage African professors in 1) a presentation on how to integrate CREP, a model focused on using team science replications to teach open science, into research methods classes; and 2) free discussion of barriers and solutions to adapting and teaching the CREP model in African institutions. After the workshop, 15 African participants will enroll in a year-long CREP project. Supported by the SPSP International Bridge-Building Award program.

Building Bridges over WEIRD Science

🕒 9:00am - 10:30am, Feb 12

This session will be hosted by Monk Prayogshala, a not-for-profit research organization in Mumbai, India. In this session, we will discuss phenomena specific to South East Asia (with a focus on India) that may not have theories in western/canonical social psychological and personality science. For instance, thus far, most theories of intergroup behaviors focus on race. It is largely unclear what happens when countries are largely monolith with respect to race, but have other facets of intergroup violence? Do theories of intergroup behaviors translate to other groups, such as different languages, religions, or caste? Similarly, the session will also discuss diverse topics of interest in South-East Asia and the Global South. In this interactive session, participants will be invited to summarize some personality and social psychological research, such as consanguinity/kin-marriages, specific to the Global South. Supported by the SPSP International Bridge-Building Award program.

Diversity and Climate Committee Lounge

🕒 10:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 12

So, you have a great idea to improve the SPSP climate?

We want to hear from you! We are always looking for new ideas and initiatives. We encourage SPSP members at any stage of their career to reach out to DCC members if interested in exploring new strategies to improve the SPSP climate. Opportunities exist to explore new initiatives and present them to the SPSP Leadership (e.g., task force committees). Please contact jkang@spsp.org or current DCC members (see link: <https://my.spsp.org/members/leadership>)

So, you want to join the DCC?

We are looking for members who are committed to diversity, equity, and inclusions and willing to be a diversity advocate on behalf of membership. Incoming members should have some experience in coordinating diversity efforts in either academic or non-academic settings. Preference is given for members who are in advanced stages of their career (i.e., not junior).

Indicate your interest by May 15th. <https://www.spsp.org/about/get-involved>

Virtual Event Lounge

🕒 11:00am - 4:00pm, Feb 12

You will not be walking down the convention center corridor or riding in elevators with attendees, so how can you run into a past colleague or student or form new connections? Hop into our virtual event lounge to video chat with up to 4 people at a time from 11:00 AM-4:00 Pm EST. The virtual event lounge (similar to the in-person hallway experience) will allow you to freely move around to video chat with other attendees. While you may be competing with work and home life priorities during the convention, we recommend you schedule time on your calendar to make a visit. Find time between sessions to pop-in and say hi!

Thinking, Black and White: Structure and Consequences of Social Categorization

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 12

People sort individuals into tidy categories to simplify the social world. Four talks reveal the structure and consequences of social categorization, exploring novel ingroup and outgroup biases, assumptions about intergroup behavior, and the "invisibility" of certain individuals. In doing so, we discuss the far-reaching societal implications of social categorization.

Individual and Contextual Determinants of a Happy Single Life

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 12

Are single people happy? How does sexual satisfaction influence their well-being and perceptions of marriage and singlehood? Does endorsing certain perceptions of marriage and singlehood influence well-being? Lastly, how do singles meet their belongingness needs? Four talks—using longitudinal and experimental methods—provide some contextualizing for whom, when, and how the single life can be good.

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 12

Moral psychology has been dominated by studies of interactions between strangers. However, most moral judgments in everyday life concern familiar others with whom we stand in particular, often ongoing relationships. The talks in this symposium illuminate why and how relationships matter for moral cognition with studies conducted in children and adults across five continents.

Student Mentoring Event (Pre-registration is required)

🕒 12:15pm - 1:15pm, Feb 12

The mentoring event offers graduate and undergraduate students an informal opportunity to discuss their research interests and career development with an established professional in the field. The mentoring event provides approximately 200 students a chance to meet with faculty, postdocs, and non-academics to discuss a variety of topics in psychology (approximately 20 topics will be available for selection). Pre-registration is required.

What to expect in this virtual event?

The virtual mentoring event will take place in a Zoom meeting room. Each mentor and their mentees will be assigned to a breakout room. Pre-registered attendees will join the specific breakout room for the topic they selected during pre-registration for 60 minutes. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher, to participate. Use of video is encouraged to have the best experience but is not required. The 60 minutes will consist of introductions of mentor and mentees, brief pre-planned discussion of the topic by mentor, and questions and answers throughout.

Early Career Mentoring Hour (Pre-registration is required)

🕒 12:15pm - 1:15pm, Feb 12

What do you get when you combine a little information, a lot of experience and a dash of fun? Early Career Mentoring Hour! Come connect with fellow early career members and talk with mentors. All participants will pre-register for the room of a specific mentor/topic. Pre-registration is required.

What to expect in this virtual event?

This virtual event will take place within Zoom meeting breakout rooms. Pre-registered attendees will join the specific breakout room they selected during pre-registration for the entire session. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher, to participate. Use of video is encouraged to have the best experience but is not required.

Why Low-Income Seniors are Missing out on Income Supports: Marrying Behavioral Insights, Design Thinking, and Qualitative Research to Increase the Take-up of the Guaranteed Income Supplement

🕒 12:30pm - 12:45pm, Feb 12

By integrating behavioural insights, design thinking, and qualitative research, this mixed methods project generated novel evidence-based insights and solutions, including two experiments and prototypes spanning the program-policy spectrum to increase low-income seniors' application rates for the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS).

Ecological Influences and Visual Attention to Infant Phenotypes

🕒 12:30pm - 12:45pm, Feb 12

The current study investigated ecological influences and visual perception of infant phenotypes. In study 1, a perceived harsh ecology influenced the perceptions of health and investment to infant phenotypes and demonstrated that women were more likely to rate infants favorably. In study 2, overweight infants were viewed longer, and there were sex differences in viewing time.

Awe Expands Our Moral Worlds: Awe Experiences Promote Moral Expansiveness

🕒 12:50pm - 1:05pm, Feb 12

Across four studies (N = 699), both dispositional and induced awe predicted greater moral expansiveness, increasing moral concern towards many distal entities beyond traditional in-groups (e.g., human out-groups, animals, and plants). Notably, Study 4, using Virtual Reality-induced awe, found that awe increased moral expansiveness via the way it activated a sense of connectedness to a greater whole.

Mapping the Motivational Basis of Fandom: The Development of Validation of the Fans Motivation Scale (FMS)

🕒 12:50pm - 1:05pm, Feb 12

This study aims to develop a comprehensive model of the motivational basis of fandom and its measurement. Combining evidence from various methods, we developed a model containing five factors: entertainment enjoyment, relationship projection, community affiliation, self-construction, and idol worship. A reliable and valid measurement, Fans Motivation Scale (FMS), was also developed.

Don't Hold Back: Why People Mistakenly Avoid Prosocial Behavior

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 12

Why do we often hold back from engaging in prosocial interactions – that is, interactions that would benefit ourselves and others? This symposium investigates several contexts where individuals hold back from these types of interactions, including providing advice, self-silencing in relationships, engaging in conversation, and expressing social support.

Time for Change, Part I: Reflections on the Makeup and Historical Methodological Practices in Social-Personality Psychology

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 12

The field of social-personality psychology has spent much of the past decade conducting what can broadly be described as ‘meta-scientific’ research on how it is that we construct knowledge: who are the researchers, who are the participants, what are the settings, and what methodological strategies were used to reach study conclusions. In this session, speakers will reflect on what we have learned from those efforts: who is included in our field, and who is excluded; what methods do we use, and what methods do we neglect; and what does all of that mean for what we know, and under what conditions are we able to apply that knowledge. Drs. Stephanie Fryberg, Roger Giner-Sorolla, Helen Neville, and Sanjay Srivastava will each give a 10-minute presentation to share their perspectives on this topic, then we will have a moderated discussion between the panelists and a virtual audience.

Both Good and Bad: Gratitude Sends Rich, Context-Dependent Signals

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 12

We find that feelings and expressions of gratitude convey a variety of rich information beyond gratitude itself, depending on context. On the bright side, gratitude can signal supportiveness, high self-esteem, and greater willingness to forgive. On the dark side, gratitude flags a person as a target to be taken advantage of in competition, and in some cultures, can even signal relational distance.

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 12

Four research labs report results from COVID projects relying on a variety of media and technologies (social/news media and mobile sensing). The large-scale projects track social and psychological effects of COVID at the individual, city, and country levels. The symposium will discuss how relying on new, ecologically valid methods can provide new insights to the study of collective crises.

Misinformation and Morality in the Age of Social Media

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 12

Why does misinformation spread on social media, and what are the consequences? People prefer content that is useful rather than accurate (Talk 1), and they fail to consider accuracy when deciding what to share (Talk 2). Moral outrage fuels the viral spread of misinformation (Talk 3), but “going viral” can diminish moral outrage at misinformation (Talk 4).

Legacy Symposium by Claude Steele: The Science of Diverse Community

🕒 2:30pm - 3:30pm, Feb 12

Keynote: This talk addresses the question of how to achieve a successfully diverse community—in a school, a classroom, a corporation, etc.—such that all people feel they can function and contribute there from the standpoint of their backgrounds and identities and yet not be disadvantaged by those identities or backgrounds? The first part of the talk diagnoses a chief barrier to successful diversity—the identity threat we can pose to each other based on the role of our identities in the history and structure of society and the mistrust it inspires. And the second part proposes strategies for building the trust needed to achieve successful diversity both interpersonally and at organizational scale.

In an informal "fireside chat", panelists will discuss the key ideas from the Legacy Keynote, and how Dr. Steele's legacy continues to influence the current state and future promise of social and personality psychology.

Biography: Claude M. Steele is an American social psychologist and a Professor of Psychology at Stanford University.

He is best known for his work on stereotype threat and its application to minority student academic performance. His earlier work dealt with research on the self (e.g., self-image, self-affirmation) as well as the role of self-regulation in addictive behaviors. In 2010, he released his book, Whistling Vivaldi and Other Clues to How Stereotypes Affect Us, summarizing years of research on stereotype threat and the underperformance of minority students in higher education.

He holds B.A. in Psychology from Hiram College, an M.A. in Social Psychology from Ohio State University, and a Ph.D. in Social Psychology and Statistical Psychology from Ohio State University.

He is elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the National Academy of Sciences, the National Science Board, the National Academy of Education, and the American Philosophical Society.

He currently serves as a trustee of the Russell Sage Foundation and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, and as a Fellow for both the American Institutes for Research and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

He has served in several major academic leadership positions as the Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost at UC Berkeley, the I. James Quillen Dean for the School of Education at Stanford University, and as the 21st Provost of Columbia University. Past roles also include serving as the President of the Society for Personality and Social Psychology, as the President of the Western Psychological Association, and as a member of the Board of Directors of the American Psychological Society.

Professor Steele holds Honorary Doctorates from Yale University, Northwestern University, University of Chicago, University of Michigan, DePaul University and Claremont Graduate University.

Legacy Program Description: The theme of Legacy program is to trace the impact of the senior scholar's seminal contribution (or body of work) to contemporary work by pairing an honored figure with two active researchers whose work builds upon the legacy's work. The luminary will have the opportunity to address the audience in whatever format they would like for half of the symposium's allotted time. The rest of the symposium time would be devoted to presentations by the two contemporary researchers who would present more traditional research talks that highlight how their work can be traced back to the honored guest's seminal contribution(s).

Personality and Social Psychology in the Arab Middle East: Emic Perspectives on Psychological Research

🕒 9:00am - 10:30am, Feb 13

This panel discussion introduces ongoing research and research opportunities in the Arab Middle East. Highlighting faculty who work in the region and emic perspectives regarding psychological processes and future research goals, the session encourages audience participation in both large group and breakout formats. The panel will introduce local faculty and research environments and highlight opportunities and challenges associated with conducting research throughout the region. It will then discuss important context sensitive concerns associated with psychological processes and research methods. The session will finish in breakout groups, allowing smaller group discussions with panelists, and encouraging networking and collaboration. Supported by the SPSP International Bridge-Building Award program.

Diversity and Climate Committee Lounge

So, you have a great idea to improve the SPSP climate?

We want to hear from you! We are always looking for new ideas and initiatives. We encourage SPSP members at any stage of their career to reach out to DCC members if interested in exploring new strategies to improve the SPSP climate. Opportunities exist to explore new initiatives and present them to the SPSP Leadership (e.g., task force committees). Please contact jkang@spsp.org or current DCC members (see link: <https://my.spsp.org/members/leadership>)

So, you want to join the DCC?

We are looking for members who are committed to diversity, equity, and inclusions and willing to be a diversity advocate on behalf of membership. Incoming members should have some experience in coordinating diversity efforts in either academic or non-academic settings. Preference is given for members who are in advanced stages of their career (i.e., not junior).

Indicate your interest by May 15th. <https://www.spsp.org/about/get-involved>

Virtual Event Lounge

🕒 11:00am - 4:00pm, Feb 13

You will not be walking down the convention center corridor or riding in elevators with attendees, so how can you run into a past colleague or student or form new connections? Hop into our virtual event lounge to video chat with up to 4 people at a time from 11:00 AM-4:00 Pm EST. The virtual event lounge (similar to the in-person hallway experience) will allow you to freely move around to video chat with other attendees. While you may be competing with work and home life priorities during the convention, we recommend you schedule time on your calendar to make a visit. Find time between sessions to pop-in and say hi!

The Theoretical and Practical Challenges of COVID-19

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 13

This symposium explores theoretical and practical challenges of COVID-19. Using a variety of methods, such as cross-sectional and longitudinal surveys, lab studies, and social media interventions, topics span the impact of COVID-19 on moral judgement, impacts on infrastructure and mental health, mask-wearing perceptions and behaviors, and scientific uncertainty and stigma.

Overlooked Fundamentals: How Culture Affects Experiences in Close Relationships

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 13

We present novel research that demonstrate culture's profound influence in shaping experiences in close relationships. By discussing between-country (i.e., East Asian vs. Western contexts) and within-country (i.e., social class) cultural differences, this symposium will extend existing knowledge of close relationships and acquaint relationship researchers with useful theories and approaches.

Beyond the Gender Binary: A Social Psychological Approach

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 13

We present research demonstrating the importance of a non-binary approach to gender. Four empirical presentations show how: gender is best considered as a bundle of separable constructs, gender identity centrality predicts negative reactions to non-binary gender, transgender people are stereotyped and engage with those stereotypes, and a social-norms based intervention can reduce transprejudice.

Nudging Donations: New Insights into Maximizing Charitable Giving

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 13

Social psychological experiments have identified many promising techniques for increasing charitable donation. However, few studies examine whether these strategies actually work in the real world. In this symposium, we describe how social psychological levers—including unpacking effects, inferences about the self, and philosophical appeals for aid—actually encourage people to give more to others.

Speaking Out against Prejudice: The Many Positive Consequences of Confronting

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 13

The present symposium highlights novel research illustrating the many (and sometimes surprisingly) positive consequences of confronting bias—spanning prejudice reduction, normative, and interpersonal outcomes. Together, these presentations build a strong case for speaking up and challenging prejudice expression across different contexts.

Graduate Diversity Award Winners and Admired Scholars Meet-Up (Invitation only)

🕒 12:15pm - 1:15pm, Feb 13

This event is exclusively for this year's Graduate Diversity Award winners and their selected admired scholars. The meet up provides an opportunity for the grad winners and admired scholars to meet each other.

What to expect in this virtual event?

The virtual event will take place in a Zoom meeting room. The Diversity and Climate Committee will give opening remarks. Then graduate student winners and admired scholars will join the breakout room that has the name of the admired scholar for 20 to 30 minutes. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher to participate. Use of video is encouraged, but not required.

Student Mentoring Event (Pre-registration is required)

🕒 12:15pm - 1:15pm, Feb 13

The mentoring event offers graduate and undergraduate students an informal opportunity to discuss their research interests and career development with an established professional in the field. The mentoring event provides approximately 200 students a chance to meet with faculty, postdocs, and non-academics to discuss a variety of topics in psychology (approximately 20 topics will be available for selection). Pre-registration is required.

What to expect in this virtual event?

The virtual mentoring event will take place in a Zoom meeting room. Each mentor and their mentees will be assigned to a breakout room. Pre-registered attendees will join the specific breakout room for the topic they selected during pre-registration for 60 minutes. Attendees need to have the Zoom application on their device, version 5.3.1 or higher, to participate. Use of video is encouraged to have the best experience but is not required. The 60 minutes will consist of introductions of mentor and mentees, brief pre-planned discussion of the topic by mentor, and questions and answers throughout.

Primarily Undergraduate Institutions Committee Lounge Event: Applying for Jobs at a PUI

🕒 12:15pm - 1:15pm, Feb 13

Join members of the Primarily Undergraduate Institutions (PUI) Committee for informal conversations about the application process for PUI institutions, from perusing job ads to preparing for the on-site interviews. We of course welcome those who are (or about to be) on the job market, but also encourage students who are thinking about working at PUI institutions to join.

Understanding Collective Action Engagement through Language

🕒 12:30pm - 12:45pm, Feb 13

Using language data from Twitter users who participated in the Black Lives Matter protests, we explore the psychological markers of activism. Evidence suggests that before participating in protests, passive supporters show characteristic patterns in their language, indicating distinct psychological processes involved in collective action engagement.

Pretty Healthy Food: How and When Aesthetics Enhance Perceived Healthiness

🕒 12:30pm - 12:45pm, Feb 13

We test how prettiness (defined by classical aesthetics, e.g., order, symmetry) impacts healthiness judgments of food. Across a range of photographed and real foods, people judged prettier versions of the same food as healthier (e.g., more nutrients, less fat) because they felt it was natural (i.e., purer). This bias was robust to financial stakes but mitigated by artificiality disclaimers.

Building Psychological Resistance against Extremist Recruitment Strategies

🕒 12:50pm - 1:05pm, Feb 13

The internet is gaining relevance as a platform where extremist organizations seek to recruit new members. We developed and tested an online game, Radicalise, to train people to recognize recruitment strategies used by extremist organizations. We show that playing Radicalise improves people's ability to spot manipulative messages and vulnerable individuals, as well as their confidence in doing so.

Increasing Population Densities Predict Decreasing Fertility Rates over Time: A 174-Nation Investigation

🕒 12:50pm - 1:05pm, Feb 13

Why have fertility rates have been declining worldwide? We examine this question from a behavioral perspective and find that increased densities are associated with lower fertility, controlling for socioecological and cultural variables. In harsh conditions that favor short-term behavioral strategies (high homicides, low GDP, and high inequality), the effect of density on fertility is attenuated.

Time for Change, Part II: Creating a More Diverse, Methodologically Rigorous, and Socially Responsive Social-Personality Psychology

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 13

The field of social-personality psychology is at multiple cross-roads. As discussed in “Time for change, Part I,” over the past decade we have learned that the make up of our discipline and some our methodological practices have inhibited some of our knowledge construction efforts, as well as our efforts to ‘give psychology away.’ In this session, speakers will outline some potential paths forward to improve our field’s diversity, rigor, and social responsiveness, and discuss how these multiple goals can be advanced simultaneously. Alison Ledgerwood, Ivuoma Onyeador, Miguel Silan, and Moin Syed will each give a 10-minute presentation to share their perspectives on this topic, then we will have a moderated discussion between the panelists and a virtual audience.

How Language Connects and Convinces

🕒 1:15pm - 2:15pm, Feb 13

Language facilitates communication. Though commonly used to express ideas directly, it can also convey meaning below the surface, through subtle shifts in when and how words are used. This symposium combines innovative methods and real-world data to examine the subtle yet powerful ability of language to shape how people process information in domains ranging from the narrative arts to politics.

The Psychology of Home: Attitudes, Impressions, and Outcomes

🕒 2:30pm - 3:30pm, Feb 13

Psychological processes are embedded in places, and there is no place more important or ubiquitous than the home—particularly during a global pandemic. This symposium explores the dynamics of the resident-home relationship: what draws people to particular places, to what extent do attitudes toward home relate to mental health, and how can public spaces be made to feel more like home?

[On Demand Only] How Being With You Changes Me

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Behaviors and perceptions of one's partner influences well-being. Sharing exciting activities with a partner improves satisfaction, however changing ourselves for them reduces feelings of authenticity. If we adopt an exchange model in relationships, we see our partners as more instrumental, while interactions with others influence our tendency to (mis)trust others.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Throughout history, intergroup conflict has persisted or simply evolved to take on new forms. By addressing the psychological mechanisms underlying intergroup conflict, we demonstrate how social groups perpetuate conflict when interacting with ingroup and high-status group members compared to outgroup and low-status group members.

Political conflict has both causes and solutions. We first show how partisan identity shapes the perception and (dis)liking of outgroup partisans and parties. We then conclude by demonstrating how political leaders can use criticism to increase trust, and how targeted advertising can increase agreement on climate change.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

This symposium sheds light on interventions that reduce inequality in naturally existing social contexts in higher education and political institutions. We present interventions that have long-lasting effects (e.g., up to five years) and focus on members from multiple groups (e.g., women, racial minorities, first-generation students, and people of lower socioeconomic status).

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

We present findings from four research programs carried out in applied contexts focused on impacting health behaviors and well-being. We illustrate what industry can gain from applying basic social psychology theory and what academic researchers can learn from industry applications of theory. We make the case for the synergy and impact achieved through greater integration of industry and academia.

[On Demand Only] Capitalism and Interdependence: Strange Bedfellows or Oil and Water?
🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Is an inclusive capitalism possible? Western capitalism privileges WEIRD, masculine, and middle-class tendencies (e.g., personal ambition, assertiveness, and competitiveness). Non-WEIRD countries, women, and working-class groups who practice more interdependent tendencies (e.g., collaboration, communality, and egalitarianism) are disadvantaged in MBA classrooms, workplaces, and global development programs.

[On Demand Only] How Perceptions of Advantaged Groups Stifle Diversity

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

How does backlash manifest when universities and organizations try to increase diversity? Four talks identify how peoples' perceptions of the advantaged group drive evaluations of diversity efforts, rather than perceptions of disadvantaged groups alone. We use this novel insight to highlight possible avenues toward more equal representation.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Persistent occupational gender segregation reinforces traditional gender stereotypes. Thus, promoting gender equality requires increasing men's representation in HEED roles. In this symposium, four talks highlight novel research exploring the internal (communal value endorsement) and external (social backlash) barriers faced by men who adopt HEED roles and suggest ways to challenge these barriers.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Gender roles hold people back despite social change. Parenthood predicts poorer well-being for unemployed men vs. women; couples in a COVID lockdown assumed traditional roles, harming their relationships. Women avoid jobs that value brilliance, assuming they will be unwelcome. Finally, people expect gender-atypical parents' sons to be less traditional, while valuing masculinity in their own kids.

Contending with group-based adversities (e.g., group-based discrimination and stereotype threat) can contribute to poor academic, psychological, and intergroup outcomes. This symposium explores whether resilience-based narratives about group-based adversities promote positive affective and academic outcomes as well as inter-minority solidarity among stigmatized individuals.

Collectively, these talks demonstrate the need for network-level analyses to illuminate persistent barriers facing women in traditionally male-dominated workspaces.

We show that prototypes of discrimination contribute to invisibility of discrimination against women of color and how intersectional frames further understanding of discrimination and socialization practices among women of color.

Indigenization can improve intergroup relations, though there is little research on the topic. Using mixed-methods to indigenize social psychological research, we describe four projects that focus on experiences with racism, reconciliation and the natural world, the development and validation of the Canadian Reconciliation Barometer, and a virtual reality representation of systemic racism.

Attention influences perception, emotion, judgment, and decision making. In this symposium, three speakers explore applications in which attention plays a key role—from intertemporal choice to confirmation bias and friendship formation. The fourth speaker will demonstrate how the multi-attribute attentional drift-diffusion model uncovers an interplay between attribute weights, gaze, and choice.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Judgments are influenced not simply by what is, but also by what could have been and what could be. We present new insights into the nature and consequences of these thoughts: counterfactuals are positively biased, they inform our perceptions of who is lucky and who is good, and they can lead us to believe that people are becoming more immoral when they probably aren't.

However, pursuing a passion does not always translate into benefits. This symposium seeks to address this by centering the discussion around the existence of commonly held lay beliefs about passion that both propel and hold back those who pursue their passion.

[On Demand Only] The New Science of Motivated Reasoning

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

This symposium showcases recent growth in the long-standing field of motivated reasoning. In four talks, we question fundamental theoretical assumptions and methods of the field, connect motivated reasoning to cognitive reappraisal – an as yet distinct but well-established motivated process – and show how one person's belief goals can impact the beliefs of those around them.

[On Demand Only] Pitfalls of Progress: Unintended Negative Consequences of Positive Social Change

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Current events expose our deep need for social reform. This symposium takes a closer look at improvement efforts that, despite our good intentions, can inadvertently undermine improvement, from fostering more negative perceptions of low-status others to posing new barriers for diversity and upward mobility. We should wisely account for these unintended wrong turns as we rightly fight for progress.

[On Demand Only] The Vital Role of Intersectionality in Theories of Social Cognition

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Psychologists increasingly understand that identities intersect to produce unique patterns of stereotyping and discrimination. Intersectionality is often thought of as a way to extend existing theories of social cognition. We argue that using an intersectional lens is vital for constructing theory. Foundational tenets of existing theories are sometimes challenged by intersectional findings.

The beauty-is-good stereotype results in positive character inferences about attractive people. Is there a complementary unattractive-is-bad stereotype? Four talks explore connections between perceptions of character and facial typicality, identifying cultural, cognitive, and neural substrates of the unattractive-is-bad stereotype.

[On Demand Only] Meta-Analytic Advancements in Social and Personality Development

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

The four talks in this symposium advance knowledge about social and personality development using meta-analytic methods. The meta-analyses presented cover social and personality constructs (i.e., relationship satisfaction, loneliness, and self-esteem) and discuss ecological momentary assessment as a method for understanding the mechanisms that explain stability and change in these constructs.

Why do Democrats and Republicans often evaluate the same event differently? The information people seek and how they interpret it both contribute to polarization, yet these perspectives have seen little cross talk to date. This symposium bridges this gap by integrating sampling and interpretive sources of bias to examine how divergent evaluations emerge across the information processing stream.

Diversity does not necessarily foster inclusion. This symposium examines the importance of majority allyship, which effectively signals identity safety for minorities. We define and distinguish between reactive and proactive allyship, providing evidence for the importance of both bias confrontation (on structural bias, from minorities' perspectives) and proactive efforts toward inclusion.

[On Demand Only] New Approaches to Classical Ideas: Computational Perspectives on Social Processes

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

This symposium showcases computational approaches to the study of classic social phenomena. The talks offer varied perspectives—ranging from morality to social categorization—that highlight how cutting-edge computational methods yield new insights into the social mind. Together, we explore how the mind handles and integrates the complex social information that underlies social cognition.

[On Demand Only] See My Pain? Experiencing Racism Versus Bystanders' Views of Racism

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

This symposium examines the gap between victims' experiences of racism and privileged bystanders' perceptions of it. Two talks examine experiences of racism reported by Latinx and Whites in the American Southwest and by Blacks in Brazil. The other two talks discuss factors affecting privileged bystanders' beliefs of racism with one talk offering a way of broadening their perspectives.

While rituals are pervasive, scholars have long debated their function for social life. Our session adds novel psychological perspectives to the debate, showcasing functional and dysfunctional features of ritual. On the one hand, rituals regulate affect and enforce group values. On the other hand, rituals hinder group creativity and even elicit expectations of cosmic punishment if violated.

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Inside the Grant Panel is a small grant competition that provides members with a behind-the-scenes view of how the grant review process works. During the Inside the Grant Panel session, experienced SPSP member reviewers discuss the merits and weaknesses of the proposals from three finalists and score them to determine a winner and two runners-up. Additionally, last year's winner, Rich Lopez, will present an update of their research: Longitudinal, Comparative Assessment of Multiple Regulatory Strategies to Promote Healthier Eating Patterns. This year's winner will receive a $3,000 grant for their research and the runners-up will receive $1,000 research grants. Inside the Grant Panel is intended to be an educational experience for both applicants and audience members and is open to any current SPSP member.

[On Demand Only] Impact of Modern Social Movements: Understanding Psychological Motivations and Reactions

🕒 9:00am - 5:00pm, Feb 14

Given widespread social mobilization towards justice, it is imperative to understand motives for and reactions to collective action efforts. Three talks explore motivations to participate in collective actions and reactions to actions and allies. Considering the many types of motivations, actions options, and who acts is vital in understanding how to advance social change towards greater equality.
